In March, 1894, Mr. Huntington tried to get the Los Angeles chamber of commerce to endorse this petition. A vote was taken after a lively campaign, the result being 328 to 131 in favor of San Pedro. Senator White's Victory.

Stephen M. White of Los Angeles, a Democrat, was elected to the United States senate. It was he who finally won the harbor for San Pedro. The Democrats were in power nationally, and Senator Frye was forced to resign the chairmanship of the committee on house, but Mr. Huntington's will was placed above the desires of the people of California.

The scheme leaked out before the bill was reported and an uproar went up for Los Angeles. Representative McLachlan protested. Mr. Herrmann told him if the opposition to Santa Monica was kept up both items would be stricken out. The protest continued and the threat was carried out, Mr. Herrmann's motion in committee to eliminate both items being passed. Congressman Charles A. Towne of Minnesota later had a $50,000 appropriation inserted for the redredging of the inner harbor at San Pedro.

Later Mr. Herrmann, acting for Mr. Huntington, made a proposition to get an appropriation for both harbors, with a proviso that the Southern Pacific should allow trackage at Santa Monica to other roads which might defire to secure an entrance. This caused a heated controversy in Los Angeles. It was urged by the opposition that this was simply a scheme on the part of the Southern Pacific by which San Pedro would get practically nothing, while the road could get Santa Monica improved and still dietate terms to rival roads, as it controlled the entire situation there. Others favored the proposition as the only hope of getting a deep sea harbor for Los Angeles. The former were found to be in a large majority. Representative McLachlan wazered, but finally stood with them.

But it was found that Huntington fortrolled this committee also. The vote showed that he had Frye of Maine, Gorman of Maryland, Jones of Nevada, Elkins of West Virginia, Quay of Pennsylvania, Murphy of New York, McMillan of Michigan. McBride of Oregon and Squire of Wisconsin. These hine sent in a majority report favoring an appropriation of $3.098,000 for Santa Monica. A minority report favoring San Pedro was signed by Neison of Minnesota, Caffery of Louisiana, Pasco of Florida, Vest of Missouri, Berry of Arkansas and White of California.

The fight was transferred to the floor

C. P. Huntington visited Los Angeles and sought 2 secret interview hith D. Freeman president, and General Charles Forman, a vice president of the chamber of commerce. In the course of that interview Mr. Huntingon said:

I do not find it to my advantage to have this harbor built at San Pedro, and I shall be compelled to oppose all efforts that you or others make to secure appropriations for that siter on the vices would interfere with the great San Pedro enterprise, twice officially endorsed by government; as might be decided by a amendment making the appropriation and making the appropriation and an amendment making the appropriation and amendment making the appropriation and small be decided by a sollows: An officer of the passenger with the foreign account. Senator White led the fight for this amendment, and Senator Frye for the opposition. The latter kept in frequent in the fight and were largely responsible for forcing Senator Frye to a compromise. By the terms of this the matter was to be left to a board of five engineers, one from the navy, one from the coast geodetic survey and three from civil life, to be named by the president. This passed the senate. The bill went to a conference, and Mr. Huntington appeared to have changed his mind, for Mr. Hermann began in the secret sessions to fight the White amendment. Representative James G. Maguire of San Francisco heard of this and threatened to expose the plot on the floor of the house. This brought Mr. Hermann to terms, and the river and harbor bill finally became a law, carrying this provision for a harbor for Los Angeles.

Attest:

E. D. R. THOMPSON,

on the first day about 20,000 persons assembled in San Pedro to see the work begin. One of the Heldmaier & Neu barges, loaded with rock, was ready to be dumped automatically by electricity when President McKinley pressed abutton in the White House library. The president pressed the button, but the machinery failed to work and the stone had to be pushed off by hand. But the work was begun and the people were enthusiastic. There were speeches by Governor Henry T. Gage, Senators White and Perkins, T. E. Gibbon and others. The next day there was an elaborate street parade and other festivities.

The work of construction has been going steadily on, and at present it is about one-third completed.

It is expected that the harbor will be ready to accommodate all deep sea commerce by the time the San Pedro railroad is completed.
